Dear Mental Health Professionals & Guests,

We invite you to the American Psychiatric Association's 2022 Mental Health Services Conference in Washington, D.C. We are pleased to bring the conference to our nation's capital and back to an in-person setting. This year, the conference returns to its roots: serving as a collaborative setting for participants to share their experiences and engage in team-based-care discussions with colleagues across disciplines. Presented in collaboration with SMI Adviser and the American Psychiatric Association Foundation, this year's conference brings all mental health professionals together to generate practical approaches and solutions that can influence systems-level change on behalf of our patients. This multidisciplinary event will empower all mental health professionals with innovative strategies and tools to shape the future of collaboration within and across communities.

This year's Mental Health Services Conference is carefully designed to explore the legal and societal issues that shape our mental health landscape in an accessible and practical manner so that all mental health professionals and advocates can take their place in advancing our society to a more just, and in turn, healthier place.

APA's Scientific Program Committee worked tirelessly to develop a program that addresses why there is such great importance placed on the interplay between sociopolitical factors and mental health and how we can most effectively lead as agents of change. This conference highlights the development of model educational and advocacy programs and the implementation of innovative clinical services designed to advance health equity and health, including mental health. The programming specifically equips attendees to promote equal access to high-quality mental health care for all persons.

Together, we'll share and develop our skills in helping those with mental illness live healthier and more rewarding lives.

Thank You!
