Choosing a Career in Psychiatry

Psychiatrists make a difference because they can apply medical knowledge and understanding to the treatment of the mentally ill in a cultural competent manner. There is untold richness in diversity in being a psychiatrist and each year more and more medical students are choosing a career in psychiatry.

Medical Student Programs

APA/APAF Medical Student Programs provide medical students who are interested in serving underserved communities the experiential learning, training, and professional development they need to be leaders in the field of psychiatry. These grants give medical students opportunities to travel to APA Meetings (Annual Meeting and The Mental Health Services Conference), receive mentorship from psychiatrists and leaders in the field, and more.

Even if psychiatry is not your chosen specialty, mental health issues correlate to many other areas of practice. Start building lifelong professional relationships and tap into APA's wealth of research and practical information.

Membership is FREE to students until graduation!

PsychSIGN

The Psychiatry Student Interest Group Network (PsychSIGN) is a national network of medical students interested in psychiatry, from those with an interest in the brain and mind to those already in the residency application and match process. PsychSIGN connect students across the country to their peers, to psychiatry residents, and to practicing psychiatrists from a broad range of subspecialties. PsychSIGN also provides mentoring opportunities, resources for your health and career, a virtual annual meeting, and ideas for expanding your interest group.
